

Interested in reuse, repair and recycling? Or in getting involved in running a creative community space? Want to share your skills as part of an award winning initiative? Or to develop your leadership skills?

We'd love to hear from you...

The Remakery is a community hub for enterprise, training and projects centred on the re-use of waste materials so as to contribute to the reduction of waste destined for landfill.

The Remakery is overseen by a board of directors who are volunteers elected by Remakery's shareholders. Directors contribute about 2 hours of their time per week and are involved at both a strategic and operational level.

This year we are particularly keen for directors with the following skills:

- ⚙ communication, marketing and or events organising
- ⚙ financial management and accounting
- ⚙ community outreach and knowledge of local stakeholders and issues
- ⚙ fundraising
- ⚙ experience of being an employer, overseeing volunteers and/or team management.

Be part of an incredible community space!

Anyone can apply and we very much encourage applications from local residents. You will need to be a Remakery shareholder to stand for election, which is easily done if you are not one already and it will only cost £1. We advise visiting the Remakery or chatting to one of our current directors before you apply. They can also explain how to become a shareholder.

To apply, simply email our current chair Angela Rouse (angela@remakery.org) a photo and short note (max. 300 words) introducing yourself, explaining why you are applying and why you would be good as a Remakery director by 26 May 2016. Please note that this will be shared on our website to enable our stakeholders to vote for their preferred candidates.

For more information see:

www.remakery.org

<https://www.facebook.com/remakery>

Al Jazeera's Earthrise on the Remakery

@remakery

